Archer Daniels Midland Company (ADM) recently held a ribbon-cutting ceremony to celebrate the opening of its new, 500,000-square-foot facility, which is built on 74 acres of land at CAN DO's Humboldt Industrial Park.

ADM, headquartered in Decatur, IL, is a global leader in cocoa processing. The plant will handle ADM's East Coast cocoa operations. It will produce cocoa butter, chocolate and cocoa powder, which will then be sold to chocolate manufacturers and food processors in various industries.

Patricia A. Woertz, ADM's chairwoman, chief executive officer and president, cited three factors that led ADM to choose the Hazleton area as the location for their new facility.

"We began looking to locate this plant in 2005," Woertz said. "There were many desirable locations. Several things attracted us to the area. We would be close to our East Coast customers and our raw materials suppliers, and there is a strong, local transportation system. It was also the skilled workforce we were tremendously fortunate to find here."

Hazleton's industrial/economic development corporation, CAN DO Inc., helped ADM in obtaining a $4.6 million funding offer from the Department of Community and Economic Development that included a $925,000 opportunity grant, $2.5 million in infrastructure development program funding, $1.05 million in job creation tax credits and $100,000 in job training assistance.

"CAN DO is proud to have played a role in the location of Archer Daniel Midland's newest cocoa processing plant to Humboldt Industrial Park. Our agency looks forward to providing ADM's local management with support for years to come," said Kevin O'Donnell, president of CAN DO.

The company is also eligible to apply for a $5.25 million loan through the Citizens Job Bank program, which offers low-interest-rate loans to companies that commit to creating or expanding jobs in Pennsylvania.

In addition to its new facility, ADM Company has plants in North and South America, Europe, Asia, and Africa. "This is the type of competitive project that could easily have been located elsewhere, and without the aggressive economic development efforts of the Governor's Action Team, it might have," said PA Governor Edward G. Rendell. "Instead, Pennsylvania will benefit from the large private investment and the hundreds of family-sustaining jobs that will be coming to Hazleton."

Twenty-two employees are already working at the facility. The company anticipates creating 200 jobs over the next three years.

Penn's Northeast Native John Blake Named Acting DCED Secretary

Governor Edward G. Rendell recently named Archbald native John Blake as acting secretary of the Department of Community and Economic Development (DCED) following the resignation of Secretary Dennis Yablonsky.

Blake served as DCED's executive deputy secretary since February 2007 where he was responsible for the daily administration and operational oversight of the department. He has more than 25 years of experience in housing, community, and economic development in the public and private sectors.

Prior to his DCED appointment, Blake was the director of Governor Rendell's Northeast Regional Office where, for four years, he served as the primary liaison to local government and to the business and economic development community in 15 counties of Northeast PA.

"John's portfolio of experience, achievement and practical savvy that he brings to the position will serve Pennsylvania's business and communities well as we face challenging economic times," said Governor Rendell. "I am confident John will help us to build upon the track record of outstanding achievements of DCED."

East Stroudsburg University Opens Science & Technology Center

In September, East Stroudsburg University, Monroe County, opened the Warren E. and Sandra Hoeffner Science and Technology Center.

The center is regarded by local business leaders as a facility for training future scientists, engineers and mathematicians.

"We fully recognize the importance of the Science and Technology Center, not only for the University, but for the area and region," said Patricia Pietrobon, vice president of research and development for Sanofi Pasteur, the largest company in the world devoted entirely to human vaccines. The company employs nearly 2,000 at its 44 building facility in Swiftwater, Monroe County.

East Stroudsburg University's new $41 million building recently opened in Monroe County.

The new center houses five academic departments—biology, chemistry, computer science and security, mathematics, and physics. The 124,000-square-foot building includes: seventeen teaching laboratories; nine research laboratories; 5,000 square feet of other laboratory space; nine classrooms; a planetarium; a multi-use 200-seat auditorium; a rooftop observatory; a large reception area; and faculty offices. Plans are also in motion to include a museum of natural history in the near future.

Construction took about two years at a cost of approximately $41 million. It was funded by both the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and private donations.

School of Architecture to Open at Marywood University

Marywood University is set to open Northeast Pennsylvania's first School of Architecture in fall 2009. With an emphasis on environmental stewardship and "green building" principles, the two-tracked degree program will offer students either a four-year bachelor's degree in Environmental Design in Architecture, a five-year bachelor's degree in Architecture, or a six-year program to earn a Master of Architecture degree.

Gregory Hunt, a former dean of the School of Architecture and Planning at The Catholic University of America, was brought in as a special consultant and has been selected as dean.

The University has committed $4 million to renovate the former health and physical education building to house the new school.

Special attention will be given to making the school itself a green design. Part of the building will have a green roof while another part will be white in an effort to deflect the sun and cut down on cooling costs. Rainwater will be collected to reuse.

The school intends to enroll twenty to thirty students for its first semester, eventually enrolling as many as three hundred students.

Sister Anne Munley, IHM, Ph.D., president of Marywood University, commented, "This major investment by the University reflects our confidence not only in our students and faculty, but also our confidence that this professional school will play a vital role in the advancement of higher education in Northeast Pennsylvania."

Marywood University's new addition joins two other professional schools that are debuting in the region: Commonwealth Medical College in fall 2009 and a proposed law school at Wilkes University, which may begin classes in 2010.

The Commonwealth Medical College Now Accepting Applications for Fall 2009

The region's newest educational asset has reached its next level. The Commonwealth Medical College (TCMC) was notified in October that the Liaison Committee on Medical Education (LCME) has granted it preliminary accreditation. That means the TCMC is now accepting applications for its Fall 2009 charter class of students.

To date, TCMC has received nearly 1,000 applications for 60 medical student spots and 30 Master of Biomedical Sciences (MBS) student spots. For the academic years of 2009 and 2010, students will use temporary facilities at Lackawanna College located in Scranton. The renovated facilities include a state-of-the-art Gross Anatomy Laboratory and Clinic Skills and Simulation Center.

According to the College, the goal is to admit 70% Pennsylvanians who will hopefully stay in the area to practice medicine. During the next 20 years, the new medical school is expected to add 425 practicing physicians to Pennsylvania. In addition, it is expected to add $70 million to the local economy and create 1,000 new jobs that directly and indirectly support the school's operations.

CenterPoint East Gets Two New Tenants

Two companies have recently signed leases at Mericle Commercial Real Estate's CenterPoint Commerce & Trade Park East in Jenkins Township, Luzerne County. Both tenants occupy a 254,200-square-foot multi-tenant building at 275-285 CenterPoint Boulevard.

254,200-square-foot speculative industrial building is home to Emery-Waterhouse Co. and Quiet Flex Manufacturing.

The Emery-Waterhouse Company, based in Portland, Maine, has opened a 135,991-square-foot sales and distribution center. The company is an independent distributor of lawn and garden products and various hardware items.

Quiet Flex Manufacturing, headquartered in Houston, TX, has opened an 80,880-square-foot manufacturing operation. The company is a high-volume, high-quality provider of flexible air duct, serving the needs of the HVAC industry. The company expects to create at least 70 jobs at the Luzerne County location.

The Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development provided an incentive financing package to Quiet Flex. "We thank Governor Rendell and our legislative coalition, especially Senator Ray Musto and Representative Mike Carroll, for continuing to provide key support to job creating companies such as Quiet Flex," said Mericle Commercial Real Estate Services Vice President Jim Hilsher.

Hilsher also thanked Janet Smith from Pennsylvania's Governor's Action Team for her assistance with the project.

Local Economic Revitalization Tax Assistance (LERTA) also played a role in attracting both businesses to the CenterPoint location. LERTA provides tax abatements on improvements made to a property for up to ten years.

Construction Opens Up 561 Acres in Valley View Business Park Phase II

The Scranton Lackawanna Industrial Building Company (SLIBCO), in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT), has started construction on Phase II of the Valley View Business Park. The project involves a roadway extension and should be completed in May 2010 at a total cost of $16.9 million.

Valley View is a mixed-use business park consisting of 763 acres. Phase I of the park is home to the Lackawanna County Center for Public Safety, Tucker Rocky and McLane Company. Adjacent to Valley View Business Park is the 132-acre Jessup Small Business Center, which has three flex buildings constructed by Mericle Commercial Real Estate Services and Verus Partners. The two parks have six buildings totaling 1 million square feet.

"Through the support of our local, state and governmental officials, we are able to make economically-sustainable projects possible," said Austin J. Burke, executive vice president, SLIBCO. "The extension of Valley View Drive, which will provide access to 561 acres consisting of 25 planned building lots, would not be possible without the participation and partnership of PennDOT."

Penn's Northeast Creates One-Of-A-Kind Regional Profile

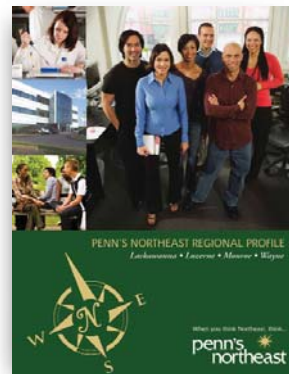

To continually find new ways to attract companies to Northeast Pennsylvania, Penn's Northeast recently published a Regional Profile. The first of its kind, comprehensive and easy-to-read four-color publication highlights the key business factors that make the region attractive while stressing the recreational amenities the area has to offer.

Companies consider a wide variety of factors when choosing a new location for their business. For that reason, the 28-page Regional Profile was designed to provide comprehensive information in a format that is attractive and concise. The publication outlines key factors such as detailed demographic statistics, educational institutions in the region, the availability of an extensive transportation network, utilities offered, recreational and cultural amenities and cost of living comparisons.

Designed by Corcoran Communications, the document captures the spirit of the region with beautiful photos.

According to Penn's Northeast president Penny Cannella, "We really wanted to create something that contained the technical information that our prospects need when looking for a new site while giving them a feel for what the region has to offer from a quality of life perspective. Putting it all in one document will be a great resource for our partners and our prospects."

The Regional Profile can be accessed electronically at www.pennsnortheast.com and clicking on Regional Profile under Top Links and is also available in hard copy. If you would like to receive a copy, please contact Penn's Northeast directly at (570) 883-0504.

Tech Firm Expands in Scranton

SRA International, a leading provider of technology and strategic consulting services and solutions, has expanded its Scranton office.

The company began operations at the Scranton Enterprise Center in February, 2008, employing two people. According to SRA's senior program manager Gary Celli, the company currently employs 18 and plans to hire five more over the next six months.

"We've doubled our office space and we anticipate taking more. We're concentrating on hiring locally," Mr. Celli said. "I've been very pleased with the quality of the employees that we've been able to hire from the region."

SRA International is based in Fairfax, Va., and has 6,200 employees worldwide. Initially the Scranton office performed sales and marketing functions but now employs statistical analysts, project managers and supply chain specialists.

The company provides logistics and supply management consulting to Monroe County's Tobyhanna Army Depot through Fort Monmouth, the Army's main electronics communications development center in Eatontown, N.J.

CAN DO Named "Large Agency of the Year" by State Economic Development Group

Citing CAN DO's major accomplishments over the last five years, the Pennsylvania Economic Development Association (PEDA) recently chose Hazleton's CAN DO, Inc. as its 2007 "Large Agency of the Year" for Pennsylvania.

CAN DO, which has served as Greater Hazleton's economic development agency since its founding in 1956, was honored for its recent achievements, including the ongoing expansion of Humboldt Industrial Park, which has brought many globally known companies and thousands of jobs to the Hazleton area.

PEDA represents more than 370 economic development professionals from local, state, utility, private and railroad organizations across the state. The organization presented the prestigious award to CAN DO at the annual PEDA Fall Conference luncheon in Blue Bell, PA.

"Choosing the Agency of the Year is always a tough job. It's a matter of selecting the 'best of the best.' Just being considered for this prestigious award is something an agency should be proud of since it is ultimately a testament to its accomplishments," said J. Patrick Killian, PEDA president.

In addition to the growth in Humboldt Industrial Park, PEDA also recognized CAN DO for its work with the Bureau of Abandoned Mine Reclamation to reclaim hundreds of acres of mine-scarred land; for

Penn's Northeast Marketing Pieces Receive NEDA Awards for Excellence

Penn's Northeast recently won two literature and promotion awards for excellence from the Northeast Economic Developers Association (NEDA).

The first award is for an international marketing brochure that highlights the many advantages of relocating or expanding a foreign-owned business in the Penn's Northeast area. It lists the region's foreign owned companies, gives distances in kilometers from Northeast Pennsylvania communities to major North American cities, and compares the cost of doing business in the region to major metro areas such as New York, Boston, and Hartford. The brochure is available in three languages: English, German and Japanese. Germany and Japan are two nations which have invested heavily in Pennsylvania in recent years.

The brochures are distributed through the Pennsylvania's Department of Community and Economic Development (DCED) and the Commonwealth's Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) Office. Pennsylvania has 22 authorized international foreign direct investment trade representatives strategically positioned in 17 locations around the globe. Those representatives work within their respective overseas markets to attract companies to Pennsylvania.

The second award is a marketing piece promoting available office space in the Penn's Northeast region. The pocket-sized piece, designed by Hazleton advertising agency Precision Design, features available office buildings and land sites along with other appealing factors such as availability of a skilled workforce, prime location, a sophisticated transportation network and a great overall quality of life.

The piece cleverly markets the region and takes "a perfect place for The Office!" (TV show) approach. It was designed to compliment the Wall Street West initiative, a ten-county partnership developed to recruit companies in financial services, information technology and related industries to Northeast Pennsylvania. It was initially distributed at a Securities Industries and Financial Markets Association (SIFMA) Technology Management Conference in New York City and later mailed to a list of potential office prospects and brokers.

"It is a privilege to market our region and its tremendous assets," said Penn's Northeast President Penny Cannella. "Being recognized by our peers at the Northeastern Economic Developers Association is always an honor."

The Scranton Plan and Pocono Mountains Economic Development Corporation were also recognized with awards of excellence by NEDA.

The Northeastern Economic Developers Association consists of over 500 professional economic developers, appointed and volunteer economic development officials, and others committed to sound economic development practice throughout its region of service.

PA Expands KOZ Program

Governor Edward G. Rendell recently signed into law legislation that extends and expands the Keystone Opportunity Zone tax incentive program designed to spur economic development and job creation, helping to revitalize communities across Pennsylvania.

Created in 1999, the KOZ program provides businesses significant state and local tax incentives to develop old industrial sites and other underused areas. KOZ's are designated by local communities and approved by the state—a partnership between each community and region, among state and local taxing bodies, school districts, economic development agencies and community-based organizations.

The new law allows the Department of Community and Economic Development to designate up to 15 new KOZ's, allows for expansion of existing ones, and extends the expiration dates of existing unoccupied parcels.
