On October 17, 2013, Marywood University will make a very special announcement about our future.

A BOLD HEART

the Centennial Campaign for Marywood University
Archbishop Tobin Encourages Graduates to Guide Choices with Love
His Grace, The Most Reverend Joseph W. Tobin, C.Ss.R., Archbishop of Indianapolis, encouraged the Class of 2013 to make choices guided by love as they travel on life’s journey.

Branching Out
Marywood University welcomed the Class of 2017 to campus in July. Students participated in one of the newer traditions of Orientation—walking through the Memorial Arch (pictured on front cover)—to symbolize new beginnings and represent the enduring Marywood experience, mission, and values.

Support from the Sidelines
Enthusiastic parents who support Marywood’s Men’s Lacrosse team go above and beyond to contribute to the program’s success and to help the program advance to the next level, with dedication that endures long after their students graduate.

Ready to Launch: New Entrepreneurs
With can-do spirit and outside-the-box thinking, a bold new generation of business leaders is learning, growing, and ready to launch from Marywood University’s innovative Entrepreneurship Launch Pad—a transformative concept championed and guided by Marywood’s Business and Managerial Science Department.
This past spring, I celebrated my 20th year of service at Marywood. When staff members reach this milestone at Marywood, they are presented with the Sister Theresa Maxis, IHM Service Award. The medal’s namesake was a woman of great courage and a determined spirit—some might call her feisty.

Theresa Maxis, who co-founded the IHM Congregation with Father Gillet, was, above all, a visionary leader. Even in the face of adversity, she advanced the Alphonsian values of empowerment, excellence, holistic education, service, respect for all people, and the realization of God-given potential. As Father Gillet wisely observed, the work of Theresa Maxis has multiplied beyond all imagining. Her bold legacy is made new, again and again, in today’s IHM Sisters and in all who embrace Marywood University’s mission and core values.

Those who claim the Marywood spirit are also claiming the spirit of Theresa Maxis, whether they know it or not, because the two are inseparable. Each generation at Marywood gives new expression and significance to the important work she began so long ago. The pages of this issue proudly celebrate that unwavering spirit, as demonstrated by the accomplishments and mission-driven actions of today’s students, faculty, trustees, alumni, parents, and friends of Marywood University.

As summer turns to fall, another inspiring chapter in Marywood’s story is being written; we’ve begun the “new work” of this generation. I think Theresa Maxis would be proud.

Kind regards.

“You are beginning a new work, which in time will be multiplied…”
- Comment attributed to Father Louis Florent Gillet, speaking to Mother Theresa Maxis, IHM

Marywood University, in accordance with applicable provisions of federal law, does not discriminate on grounds of race, color, national origin, sex, age, or disability in the administration of any of its educational programs or activities, including admission, or with respect to employment. Inquiries should be directed to Dr. Patricia Dunleavy, Associate Vice President for Human Resources, Marywood University, Scranton, PA 18509-1598. Phone: (570) 348-6220 or e-mail: dunleavy@marywood.edu.
At the turn of the twentieth century, Mother M. Cyril Conway, who was the Superior General of the IHM Congregation at the time, made it her singular mission each day to travel from the former St. Cecilia’s Academy in downtown Scranton up to the hills of Green Ridge, where she could oversee the construction of a new building—the Motherhouse at Mt. St. Mary’s that would eventually become Marywood.

Due to a street car strike, she had to make this arduous journey on foot, dressed in the traditional full habit. Mother Cyril’s daily dedication to this task allowed her to closely supervise the work, make needed changes, and even steel her to formally object an attempt by the Lackawanna and Wyoming Valley Railroad Company to build a rail line through the grounds. Without her tenacity and faith, Marywood might not have been built; but Mother Cyril was not one to “play small”—she saw a bigger vision before her and moved boldly forward to realize it. She established a solid foundation for a big dream and an ongoing mission that continues to transform lives, generations later.

Our Centennial is on the horizon, and so too are historic plans for this University. As we anticipate this momentous milestone, just two short years away, it is important to reflect on who we are, where we’ve been, and, most importantly, where we’re going. Recalling the courage of leaders like Mother Cyril gives us confidence to expand that transformative vision, not just for our time, but for future generations.

The Marywood mission endures; it is alive and well in the day-to-day interactions between faculty and students, at scholastic and athletic events, and through the “Forever Green” pride shared by our graduates. Time-honored traditions like Orientation, Commencement, and Reunion Weekend magnify the mission on an even greater scale, from the potential of our newest students to the ongoing success of our esteemed alumni.

This is an incredible time at Marywood University. We will not “play small” and settle for something less; like Mother Cyril, we will dream big, and achieve something more—with great passion.

Sister Anne Munley, IHM, Ph.D.
President, Marywood University

“There is no passion to be found in playing small—in settling for a life that is less than what you are capable of living.”
- Nelson Mandela
His Grace, The Most Reverend Joseph W. Tobin, C.Ss.R, Archbishop of Indianapolis, was the keynote speaker at Marywood University’s 95th Commencement on Sunday, May 12, 2013, at the Mohegan Sun Arena, Wilkes-Barre, PA. He was awarded an honorary doctorate during the ceremony. Archbishop Tobin, a Redemptorist, noted that his order and the IHM Congregation “share a similar spiritual DNA” in their Alphonsian spirituality. Comparing life to a journey, he said the graduates had a choice to travel as tourists or pilgrims—tourists, with cursory, superficial connections to events and people around them, or pilgrims, with a deep connection to God and a commitment to the common good. He urged them to make choices guided by love. “Even when the pilgrimage takes you far from this place, the spirit you breathed at Marywood University will guide the choices you make,” noted Archbishop Tobin. “The Spanish mystic, Juan de la Cruz, reminds us that in the evening of our life, we shall be judged on love. It behooves us, I think, not to carry excessive baggage. At the end of the pilgrimage, all that we really will need is love: to love God as God deserves to be loved and to love our fellow travelers as sisters and brothers.”
James G. Gavin
Elected to Board of Trustees

Sister Anne Munley, IHM, Ph.D., Marywood University President, recently announced that James G. Gavin, Scranton, PA, has been elected to Marywood’s Board of Trustees. In addition, the new slate of officers elected for the 2013-2014 year includes Marion Munley, J.D., Moosic, PA, Chair; Ann R. Henry, Ph.D., ’73 Flemington, N.J., Vice Chair; Antonia M. Schierling ’60, Rockville, MD, Treasurer, and Michael E. Bugno ’88, Roswell, GA, Secretary.

James G. Gavin
(M.S.W. ‘73; M.S. ‘85)
Mr. Gavin is the President and Chief Executive Officer of Community Care Behavioral Health Organization: A University of Pittsburgh Medical Center Company, a position he has held since 1999. He is responsible for all aspects of the organization’s clinical, quality, and business functions.

Mr. Gavin works collaboratively with state and county officials, as well as other behavioral health stakeholders, to ensure the delivery of clinically effective, accessible, and cost-efficient behavioral health services. He has over 40 years of training and experience in behavioral health care, from clinical service delivery through executive management.

His professional affiliations include service as a board member and past president of Pennsylvania Community Providers Associates, where he also was chair of the organization’s Managed Care Task Force; membership in the National Association of Social Workers; and founding membership and service as chairman of the Community Behavioral Healthcare Network of Pennsylvania, for which he has also served as interim president.

Additionally, Mr. Gavin has been an active leader on a host of community boards and committees, including St. Joseph’s Center, Area Agency on Aging of Lackawanna County, Goodwill Industries, Holy Rosary Parish Council, IHM Sponsorship Education Program, IHM Peace and Justice Committee, and the Mental Health Association of Allegheny County. His current activities include board membership with the Wright Center for Graduate Medical Education and committee memberships with the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare’s Children’s Advisory and Quality Committees, Allegheny County’s Block Grant Advisory Committee, and the Children’s Cabinet for the Allegheny County Human Services Department.

Mr. Gavin, a licensed social worker in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Sociology from the University of Scranton and two master’s degrees—a Master of Social Work and a Master of Managerial Science—from Marywood University.

Hilton Foundation Grant Expands Education Program to Nine African Countries

Marywood University and The African Sisters Education Collaborative (ASEC) recently received a 4.5 million dollar grant from the Conrad N. Hilton Foundation that will be used to expand the Sisters Leadership Development Initiative (SLDI) program to serve sisters in Malawi, Cameroon, and South Sudan, bringing the total number of countries participating in leadership and financial management training to nine (Ghana, Nigeria, Kenya, Cameroon, Uganda, Tanzania, Zambia, Malawi and Southern Sudan).

The expansion is part of Phase III, and will enable sisters to advance human development more widely and effectively. Phase III will serve 756 new individual sisters and over 537 sisters via the alumnae associations.

Participating sisters will build their leadership capacities to become more resourceful and learn to effectively steward and invigorate their ministries. Notably, sisters will learn to develop sustainable plans to support their growing congregations and prepare for increased vocations.

ASEC and Marywood University also have been awarded a $3.85 million dollar grant from the Conrad N. Hilton Foundation for the Higher Education for Sisters in Africa (HESA) project that will enable 233 Catholic sisters to acquire higher education credentials. HESA will be implemented in seven sub-Saharan countries: Ghana, Nigeria, Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, South Sudan, and Zambia. Through HESA, 185 sisters will receive bachelor’s degrees and 48 will receive associate degrees in a variety of higher education institutions in Africa and through partnerships between American and African universities.

The Class of 2017 set foot on campus for the first time as Marywood students during Orientation Weekend, July 12 & 13. Marywood University takes pride in the attention given to assuring success in the transitions students and families face in adjusting to college life. This year, students were encouraged to “Branch Out,” and make the most of their Marywood experience.

During her welcome address, Sister Anne Munley, IHM, President, told the students, “In nature, the tiniest plant is as important as the tallest tree, because each has its own purpose, its own reason for being. Each one contributes to the overall health and well-being of the entire environment...So, open your eyes, minds, and hearts to the new opportunities before you—branch out and grow. Don’t feel that you have to wait to make a difference—start right away!”

One of the newer traditions of Orientation—walking through the Memorial Arch—was celebrated by students of the incoming class, symbolizing new beginnings, along with the enduring Marywood spirit, mission, and values.
DIGEST

PSYCHOLOGICAL EXCHANGE

Last year, four Psy.D. students accompanied Bradley Janey, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Psychology and Counseling, on a trip to Tomsk State University, in Tomsk, Russia. The trip provided intensive training in Clinical Supervision for 50-60 Russian clinical psychologists, university students, and university faculty.

Dr. Janey noted, “There is a profound need for this kind of training, because clinical supervision is a crucial pedagogy in clinical psychology and other allied professions, yet it is virtually unknown in that region of the world.”

Over the course of two weeks, participants attended daily lectures on supervision from Dr. Janey and met for small group discussions led by Psy.D. students, including Daniel Babskie, Jennifer Kehoe, Sabina Glab, and Joseph Reichman. While in Tomsk, students stayed with Russian host families. This eliminated the expense of lodging for students, while also bringing them into close, daily contact with local residents.

Other activities included a myriad of informal social gatherings, a number of cultural excursions, and student presentations on American culture at the American Center at Tomsk State University. Dr. Janey said, students have repeatedly described the trip as “life-changing” and “a very intensive cultural exchange experience.”

CHAMBER SINGERS Named Finalists for the American Prize

The Marywood University Chamber Singers, Dr. Rick Hoffenberg conductor, were selected as finalists for The American Prize in Choral Performance (College/University Division), for 2012. The ensemble was selected from scores of applications reviewed this summer from all across the United States. The American Prize is a series of new, non-profit competitions, unique in scope and structure, designed to recognize and reward the best performing artists, ensembles, and composers in the United States. The American Prize was founded in 2009 and is awarded annually in many areas of the performing arts.

Finalists for The American Prize receive professional adjudication and regional, national, and international recognition based on their recorded performances. In addition to written evaluations from judges, winners, and runners-up are profiled on The American Prize website.

The American Prize is administered by Hat City Music Theater, Inc., a non-profit performing arts organization based in Danbury, Connecticut.

WIND ENSEMBLE Students Earn State Honors

Approximately 100 of the state’s top collegiate musicians from more than 25 universities performed together when the 66th Annual Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Band convened this past spring. Included in this number were six members of the Marywood University Wind Ensemble who were chosen through a competitive application process.

Intercollegiate Band members spent three days preparing a full program under the direction of Lt. Colonel Alan Bonner, United States Air Force (ret.). The performance was held on Sunday, March 17, at Mansfield University. The Wind Ensemble is under the artistic direction of Dr. F. David Romines.
MSW PROGRAM EXPANDS to the Poconos

Marywood University and East Stroudsburg University recently signed an agreement that will allow Marywood to offer its Master of Social Work (MSW) degree on East Stroudsburg’s campus. Beginning with the Fall 2013 semester, MSW students in Stroudsburg and the surrounding areas can earn their Marywood MSW degree off-campus—a move that Lloyd Lyter, Ph.D., Director of Marywood’s Pocono Program, calls “significant.”

The Marywood-East Stroudsburg University social work collaboration comes at a good time. The Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry has anticipated a nearly ten percent growth in the need for social workers over the next decade in the state. According to Dr. Lyter, this collaboration will help meet that need, providing Marywood students with education and training that will give them a competitive edge in the job market.

Sister Anne Munley, IHM, Ph.D., President of Marywood University, spoke to a joint crowd of Marywood University and East Stroudsburg University students, faculty, and staff at the agreement signing on East Stroudsburg University’s campus on June 14.

“There is a growing demand for social workers with graduate degrees, particularly in this region,” Sister Anne said. “It is only fitting, then, that we expand our educational outreach by offering a graduate social work program to students in the Poconos, at a location nearer to where the social work professionals of this area live, work, and make a difference each day.”

Marywood’s School of Social Work and Administrative Studies began in 1969. Since that time more than 4,000 students have graduated from the University with a social work degree.

ADDY AWARDS

Students, Staff Win Silver and Gold Awards

Marywood University art students swept the student awards at the NEPA 2013 ADDY Awards ceremony at the annual awards dinner on March 8. This is the eighth consecutive year in which Marywood art students have won ADDY Awards.

The ceremony, held at the Hilton Scranton, recognized 2012 creative efforts in print, web, video, radio, and outdoor advertising and design, primarily featuring the work of professionals in the ad agency business throughout the region. Marywood University students started winning ADDYs in 2005, when Marywood graphic design faculty members, John Meza, M.F.A., and Christine Medley, M.F.A., began encouraging their students to enter into the competition. Eight years later, the awards keep rolling in.

Cynthia Jones ’12 won a gold ADDY for her self-promotion CD (pictured above). Colin Bigart, senior graphic design student, won silver for his eco-friendly package design and product, “TEO” (pictured below). Erin Risboskin, a senior graphic design student, won silver for her eye chart call for entries poster. Finally, in a repeat of the 2011 and 2012 ADDY awards, the University staff was recognized. Jessica Meoni ’12, a Marywood Marketing and Communications staff member and alumna, won three silver awards for her design of university-related promotional materials.

Nationwide, The American Advertising Federation’s ADDY Awards attract more than 50,000 entries for local competitions every year. The regional ADDY competition is the first of a three-tier, national competition. At the second tier, local winners compete against other winners in 15 district competitions. District winners then move on to the third tier, which is the national ADDY Awards competition.
Few people know Marywood the way Dr. Mary Anne Fedrick (B.A. ’68, M.S. ’72, M.A. ’80) does. When someone asks how long she’s been at Marywood, the answer sounds like a string of zingers in a comedian’s monologue: longer than half the buildings... longer than a lot of the trees... longer than the name “University.” She was here before there were men on campus—let alone men’s varsity sports teams. She was here when a “smart classroom” meant there were exceptionally bright students in it.

She has been an undergraduate student, a graduate student, an alumna (with a bachelor’s and two master’s degrees), a library faculty member, a library director, an admissions director, an enrollment officer, and an academic dean. As of June 30, Dr. Fedrick has been enjoying a new Marywood role—that of retiree.

With the exception of the three years that she taught Latin at what was once Scranton Central High School, Dr. Fedrick’s whole career has been at Marywood. She served as the Dean of the Reap College of Education and Human Development since 2004. In this role, she enjoyed mentoring faculty, expanding research opportunities for students, strengthening the doctoral programs, and helping to shape the Reap College’s identity.

Her personal career highlights also include successfully implementing the first automated library system at Marywood (as Library Director), increasing enrollment and admissions (as Interim Director of Undergraduate Admissions), and the acceptance of Marywood’s recent Middle States periodic review report (as the Steering Committee Chair).

As a distinguished educator, Dr. Fedrick has researched the areas of technology integration, organizational culture, and organizational change. She also became the ultimate “go to” individual for questions about university policies, practices, and almost everything else. During her 42 years at Marywood, she reflected, the one thing that has remained constant is change.

“I see myself as a student of change. My dissertation was about change, and I’ve studied change,” Dr. Fedrick explained. “I’ve seen a great deal of change since I came to Marywood, and there will be more when I leave.”

What she will miss, however, are the people and the community she has known and loved for so long.

“I think the people and the sense of community make Marywood what it is,” said Dr. Fedrick. “Reflecting back, I have seen so much growth and expansion, and yet I am always struck by the fact that while Marywood expands and changes physically and even academically, the core values and mission have never wavered or changed. The spirit of Marywood remains true and strong.”

-Dr. Mary Anne Fedrick

Throughout her tenure at Marywood, she served the University as a faithful volunteer, helping with efforts from fundraising for the Marywood Fund, to participating in phonathons, serving on reunion committees, sending referrals for promising students, acting as a class agent, and helping with the Campus Campaign. Twice she served as a member of the Leadership Team for the Campus Campaigns.

During the recent Reunion Weekend, Dr. Fedrick was honored by the Marywood Alumni Association with the 2013 Sister Denis Donegan Award for Long-term Service to Marywood (see story on Page 26).

She observed, “Marywood is a physical place, but it’s also just a part of who you are... that’s what I will take with me. It’s been a great run.”
Dr. Clayton Pheasant Retires

UNIVERSITY ADVANCEMENT VP GUIDED
22 YEARS OF GROWTH

In 1991, Marywood was in the beginning stages of momentous change. Every area of the campus was ready to grow. Before the transformation of Marywood’s next two decades could occur, however, a comprehensive development program had to be put in place.

Thanks to Clayton N. Pheasant, D. Min., who became Vice President for Advancement in 1991, the idea of advancement at Marywood has become synonymous with philanthropy, resource acquisition, branding, donor stewardship, capital construction, and alumni participation at a national level. Dr. Pheasant arrived on campus in the early stages of an ambitious capital campaign—Impact 2000. In 1996, the campaign wrapped up Phase One after surpassing the $30 million goal. In 2002, the campaign concluded, realizing $58.5 million and surpassing its goal by over $3.5 million. These funds helped launch one of the most extensive building programs in Marywood’s history.

“I was here at a time when the institution was growing outward. Every building on campus was either built or significantly renovated during my tenure,” Dr. Pheasant reflected. “I will say that it is with a great deal of satisfaction that I’m able to look at what’s happened and recognize that I’ve had a part in it.”

During his 22-year tenure, Dr. Pheasant guided the advancement operations from a fledgling program to a comprehensive operation with significant progress in development, alumni relations, and marketing and communications. Among the multiple capital initiatives that took place during his career—all of which had a beneficial impact—he recalls with particular satisfaction the construction of the McGowan Center for Graduate and Professional Studies (1997) and the Insalaco Center for Studio Arts (2001).

“Building the McGowan Center was necessary for the development of our graduate programs,” said Dr. Pheasant. “We got a commitment of a million dollars from the McGowan Foundation, with a challenge grant to be matched by a million dollars. That money and that challenge grant changed the whole concept of fundraising for Marywood—it was a transition in the way we thought about what we could accomplish.”

Just as the McGowan Center strengthened Marywood’s graduate programs and transformed the face of philanthropic efforts on campus, Dr. Pheasant noted that the Insalaco Center was the embodiment of a distinctive history and vision for the University’s art programs. This kind of project, he said, motivated people to step up and meet Marywood’s challenges, helping the institution to grow in ways that deeply reflected its mission and purpose.

“Every benefactor is important, including the support of the named and the unnamed,” Dr. Pheasant observed with gratitude. “The important thing is that people commit themselves to giving at the level that is appropriate for them. What it ultimately boils down to is establishing personal relationships—then people hear our story, catch the vision, and want to help us to move that vision forward.”

He is quick to thank others—benefactors and staff members alike. “I appreciate good leadership; dedicated, committed trustees and alumni; excellent faculty and staff,” Dr. Pheasant stated. “I especially wish to thank Patti Munley-Cerda, who served as my Executive Secretary all these years. We arrived at Marywood together, within days of each other. I can’t thank her enough for more than 20 years of valuable service and invaluable friendship.”

Dr. Pheasant’s dedication to the concept of philanthropic support for nonprofit community and professional organizations everywhere—including the YMCA, the Dunmore Rotary Club, the National Society of Fund Raising Executives, and the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education—combined with his leadership in advancement at Marywood have created a lasting impact on the University and all who share Marywood’s mission and vision.

“The important thing is that people commit themselves to giving at the level that is appropriate for them. What it ultimately boils down to is establishing personal relationships—then people hear our story, catch the vision, and want to help us to move that vision forward.”

-Dr. Clayton Pheasant
Lori E. Swanchak, Ph.D., PA-C, Program Director of Marywood’s Physician Assistant Program, has received national recognition for her work and writing in the field of physician assistant education. She has been awarded the Physician Assistant Education Association’s (PAEA) Article of the Year Award for her well-researched study of “The Effect of Early Geriatric Exposure upon Career Development and Subspecialty Selection among Physician Assistant Students,” published in the Journal of Physician Assistant Education (JPAE).

The award, which was presented at PAEA’s recent Education Forum in Seattle, recognizes physician assistant (PA) educators who publish articles about the training and education of future generations of PAs. Criteria for the award include having an impact on the PA profession with implications for workforce and interdisciplinary training/education.

“The Effect of Early Geriatric Exposure upon Career Development and Subspecialty Selection among Physician Assistant Students” focuses on the need for geriatric care as the population of elderly patients grows. Dr. Swanchak’s article reflects the current climate of PA education, highlighting the lack of practitioners in geriatric medical care and emphasizing the problems that may result.

According to her research, students at five Pennsylvania PA programs expressed little interest in both geriatric coursework and clinical exposure. She concludes that the current exposure to elderly patients may be inadequate to influence PA students, and that a multifaceted approach may result in an increase of PA students in geriatric medicine.

“I was surprised, yet thrilled, to receive the call from the awards chairperson notifying me of the award,” Dr. Swanchak said. “It is a great honor to be recognized by your peers for doing something you enjoy while also contributing to the profession and PA education.”

Kathleen Terry ’12 and Joyce George ’12, who were graduate students at the time, assisted with the research and analysis for Dr. Swanchak’s article.

At its recent Annual Meeting in Denver (June 19-21), the Catholic Press Association announced that Laurie Cassidy, Ph.D., Chair of Marywood’s Religious Studies Department, along with her co-editor, Maureen H. O’Connell, won a Catholic Press Award. The two were recognized with the First Place Award for Books on Gender Issues for their book, She Who Imagines.

This volume includes an introduction written by Dr. Cassidy and her co-editor and 12 essays written by different authors. The collection includes the articles, “Picturing Suffering: The Moral Dilemmas in Gazing at Photographs of Human Anguish,” by Dr. Laurie Cassidy, and “Being Immaculate: Images of Oppression and Emancipation,” by Sr. Mary Ann Zimmer, N.D., Ph.D., both of Marywood’s Religious Studies Department.

The citation for the award commends She Who Imagines and notes, “The theology of aesthetics takes many steps forward through this expansive work to open the reader’s mind, break down barriers, and forge new avenues for women in the Church and in the world. The beauty of this volume lies in the wisdom of its women authors who together provide a life-affirming book that raises the standard of justice and dignity for all people.”

Please join us on Sunday, April 27, 2014, for a Scholarship Luncheon as we honor our gracious benefactors who turn bold dreams into bold ideas through the gift of scholarship.

We look forward to holding our luncheon in the spring, in place of our annual dinner in the fall, as we continue down the path to the Centennial and look unveil some exciting plans for our bold future.
Dr. John J. Lemoncelli, Ed.D., Professor of Counseling and Psychology and Director of the Psychological Services Center at Marywood University, has written a new book, Healing from Childhood Abuse: Understanding the Effects, Taking Control to Recover, to enable those who suffer in silence to understand what happened, take control, and begin and maintain a program of recovery. The book helps those abused in childhood to grasp how their experience impacted their development and the extent to which it negatively affects their present lives; encourages them to let go of the belief that they are damaged, dirty, or at fault; and provides an effective strategy for externalizing the source of their anguish, rather than blaming themselves.

Dr. Lemoncelli, who has taught at Marywood for more than 25 years, outlines several stages and common issues that may need to be addressed. Since no “one size fits all” treatment is possible, he provides strategies that empower victims to identify the specific sources of their pain. For more information, visit www.drlemoncelli.com.
What makes a successful college athletics program in the 21st century? While great players and skilled coaches can make things happen on the field, it’s what happens off the field that brings a program to the next level.

For the Men’s Lacrosse program, parental support is essential to student success on the field and in the classroom.

“While our budget covers many programmatic activities, there are many opportunities that are only possible with financial support from our parents,” says Scott Dalgliesh, Men’s Lacrosse Head Coach.

Gifts from parents compose nearly 60 percent of all gifts to the program. These gifts go a long way, helping to support team needs like technology and upgraded apparel. Support from the highly enthusiastic group of lacrosse parents spans further than financial backing for the program, however. Many parents pitch in during team tailgates after each game.

“We have been blessed many times over, and what is so wonderful is that each Marywood lacrosse family contributes individually for the total success of the program. And contributions are not just measured financially, but in terms of time, talents, and prayer,” says Anne Marie Fallek ’76. She and her husband, Mark, are the parents of Alexander Fallek ’15.

The group uses the website signupgenius.com to coordinate post-game refreshments and help the team unwind after each contest. (Learn more by visiting http://goo.gl/IRD6N.) Many parents have even hosted gatherings after away games, welcoming the team and their families into their homes.

“We have been blessed many times over, and what is so wonderful is that each Marywood lacrosse family contributes individually for the total success of the program. And contributions are not just measured financially, but in terms of time, talents, and prayer.” - Anne Marie Fallek ’76
“There really is a family-first environment here at Marywood, and our men’s lacrosse parents certainly step up to the plate. I’m always asked by parents how we can take the program to the next level. This commitment and support helps drive the program to new heights.” -Coach Dalgliesh

Sue and Al Cornella, parents of Nicholas Cornella ’13, expressed the feeling of team unity among parents and the lacrosse program. “When someone is part of a team they have an immediate sense of belonging,” said Mr. Cornella. “The team truly does become your family. They support you and you support them.” Parental support of the Men’s Lacrosse program doesn’t end after graduation. Many parents of graduated students, like Michael and Janet Riley, parents of Christopher Riley ’12, still attend games and enjoy seeing the continued success of the program. Mr. Riley recently stopped by a game at Stony Brook and was amazed at how many parents of graduated students still support the program. He said, “We miss the four years of traveling to the games along with the friends that we as parents made along the way. You become family, and that is something that the sport and Marywood stands for: family.”

Two former Marywood University men’s basketball players and a former women’s soccer star were inducted as the 17th class of honorees into Marywood University’s prestigious Athletics Hall of Fame on Saturday, February 2, 2013, on the University’s campus. Lindsay (Pappas) Pagniucci ‘03, Doug Billet ‘03, and Harold Shaw ‘01 were selected for induction by the University’s Hall of Fame Committee.

Lindsay (Pappas) Pagniucci ‘03 established nearly every offensive record during her four-year career on the women’s soccer team.

Doug Billet ‘03 was a four-year starter for the men’s basketball program, named to the Pennsylvania Athletic Conference’s All-Conference Second Team for both the 2001-2002 and 2002-2003 seasons, and was an Honorable Mention selection in the 2000-2001 season.

Harold Shaw ‘01 became the first Marywood men’s basketball player to earn an All-Conference honor when he was named to the Pennsylvania Athletic Conference’s Second Team for the 1999-2000 season. Along with Billet, he guided the Pacers to their first ever post-season appearance in the 1999-2000 season PAC playoffs.

Marywood University finished the 2012-2013 academic year ranked 12th in the country in team grade point average, as the Women’s Basketball Coaches’ Association (WBCA) announced its annual Academic Top 25 for NCAA Division III. Coach Tara Macciocco’s Pacers posted a 3.514 grade point average for the year and are the only Colonial States Athletic Conference (CSAC) institution in the rankings.

Marywood finished the 2012-2013 season with an overall record of 15-13, which included a 11-5 mark in conference play. The Pacers reached the CSAC semifinals for the second consecutive year in their fifth straight playoff appearance, while also qualifying for the Eastern College Athletic Conference South Region tournament for the third year in a row.

Marywood University alumnus Ryan Jones ’13 led the United States open men’s soccer team to its first-ever gold medal at the Maccabiah Games in Israel. The United States needed penalty kicks to defeat Argentina 2-2 (4-3) in the championship game July 29.

Jones connected on the United States’ second penalty kick opportunity, placing his shot in the top right corner to tie it at 1 apiece. Argentina evened it at 3-3 before the Americans’ Scott Rowling connected on the fifth and final kick to clinch the championship.

Held every four years since 1932, the Maccabiah Games is the world’s third largest international athletics competition, consisting of over 7,000 Jewish athletes from 60-plus countries. Jones, a native of Holland, Pa., received his bachelor’s degree from Marywood in May and finished his collegiate career with CSAC Player of the Year honors last season.

Marywood University has announced the addition of Outdoor Track and Field to Marywood’s varsity athletics offerings. With competition to begin in the fall of the 2014-2015 academic year, the men’s and women’s Outdoor Track and Field teams are the University’s 18th and 19th varsity athletics programs, as well as the sixth and seventh sports added since 2008.

Marywood becomes the fifth Colonial States Athletic Conference (CSAC) member institution to offer outdoor track and field, increasing the likelihood of a Conference Championship meet and automatic berth into the NCAA Division III team and individual Championships. Marywood joins Gwynedd-Mercy College, Immaculata University, Keystone College, and Neumann University in offering outdoor men’s and women’s track and field.

A national search for a full-time Head Coach of the Outdoor Track & Field Teams is ongoing. The new coach will assume duties this fall with a full year to recruit new team members for the Fall 2014 season. The Head Coach will also become the Head Coach of the Men’s and Women’s Cross Country Teams as of January 2014.

Ready to Launch
When Captain Jim Lovell, aboard the crippled Apollo 13 spacecraft, made that historic call for help, it sent NASA engineers, experts, and astronauts scrambling to find a rescue plan—and it triggered an equally historic response from mission control: “Failure is not an option.” The story that might have been a tragedy became instead a triumph of American ingenuity, determination, and courage.

Precisely this same can-do spirit and outside-the-box thinking is alive and well at Marywood—with a bold new generation of business leaders, ready to blast off and make history of their own from the University’s innovative, ready-for-liftoff Entrepreneurship Launch Pad.

The ELP concept, as a way to help students get off to a flying start in the business world, is a brainchild of Drs. Art Comstock and Chris Speicher. Geared especially for students whose goal is to launch their own business enterprises, the program pairs practical, down-to-earth experiences with a broad academic and theoretical background—plus a firm grounding in values of ethical leadership, integrity, and accountability, at which Marywood has long excelled.

In a sense, ELP is an extension of the “Sandbox Initiative,” undertaken with the help of a state grant. Its aim was to get teams from area colleges and universities together to put forth business ideas. Different entrepreneurs, professionals, and instructors would speak each week, giving students the nuts-and-bolts of how to do a start-up, covering everything from legal aspects to marketing strategies, personnel, social media, and more. The ensuing Great Valley Technology Alliance (GVTA) Business Plan Competition required teams to present a plan for a new business—with start-up capital as the top prize. Marywood sent four teams each year...with stunning results: to wit, three winners and four runners-up since the competition began eleven years go.

Winner or not, for budding entrepreneurs, the experience itself has proved invaluable: 61 percent of participants have started businesses as a direct result of participation; 55 percent have started other businesses; 91 percent indicated that being part of the GVTA competition was extremely helpful; 70 percent said participation had a positive effect on their careers. Proposed entrepreneurial ventures have been as varied as the students themselves.

Take for instance, Jack Reager ’00 (MBA ’04), pictured at right, a GVTA finalist who founded BlackOut Design. This creative, full-service, interactive marketing agency blends emerging technologies with traditional media. Under Reager’s innovative guidance, BlackOut Design turns out award-winning materials for an impressive, constantly-growing list of nationally famous clients. (See how Jack Reager defines success: www.youtube.com/watch?v=jrgwPajDasA)

Winner of the Entrepreneur Institute Competition, grad student Richard Powers ’11, who earned his bachelor’s degree in Biotechnology, teamed up with MBA student Richard Satyavrata ’11, who earned a BBA in Aviation Management, and Jonathan Bieler ’12, who was, at the time of the proposal, an undergraduate Business Management student, to present a business plan for Powers’ unusual invention: customized turkey calls.

Powers has been hunting turkey with his father since he was a boy; he developed the exceptionally realistic calls using laser engraving and web-based personalized design. He’d once planned to become a dentist, but with the GVTA win, he’s looking to market his Triple Toe Turkey Calls to an estimated 980,000 turkey hunters across the U.S. He’s already had a chance to demonstrate his call to thousands of area hunters through a recent feature on WNEP’s popular Pennsylvania Outdoor Life. (http://wnep.com/2012/04/08/triple-toe-turkey-calls/)

The aroma of success takes many forms. Consider Danielle Fleming (M.A. ’03, M.Ed. ’11), founder of Danielle and Company, Inc., who had already earned her M.A. as a mental health professional when she returned to Marywood to pursue a second master’s in Instructional Leadership. Fleming, who has served on the board of the GVTA, was a previous judge for the Business Plan Competition, and a lecturer for Marywood’s Entrepreneurship Series, had been fascinated with the way certain aromas can influence moods and behaviors. She decided to try infusing beneficial scents into bars of soap, an effort that began as a “bubbly experiment,” she said.

Fleming made specially scented soaps in her kitchen and sold them at the local farmer’s market, beginning her business in 2002 while still a graduate student at Marywood. “I love how Marywood is working with students to encourage entrepreneurship,” she said, noting that when she started her company, “there was little support in the region” for such endeavors. There was, however, support and encouragement from the Marywood community. Fleming won a Keystone Innovation Grant in 2009 that awarded $49,000 to her project, “The Behavioral Scent Classification System: Development and Commercialization.” This collaboration between Danielle and Company and Marywood University created baseline research in the development of a behaviorally-based scent classification system. Fleming and C. Estelle Campenni, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Psychology and Psychology Program Director, were the principal investigators on the yearlong project. Today, the firm markets a range of wonderfully scented, eco-friendly beauty products internationally—and Danielle Fleming is the recipient of multiple academic and business awards. (www.danielleandcompany.com)

Convinced that technology can help block one of the world’s cruelest killers, three enterprising young women, Antonia Cianflone ’15, Alyssa Kintz ’14, and Evana Salierno ’15, all undergraduate Business Management students, have developed a “Safe Sleeping” baby “onesie” to help prevent the tragedy of SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome)—a leading cause of death among infants. A special sensor in the garment will monitor a baby’s vital information, which parents can access via a downloadable app. These inventive entrepreneurs are presently seeking a patent for their innovative idea.

Shaun Hynes ’13, who just earned his BBA in Business Management, wants to put technology to work in another important medical field—as an app to help diabetics. He’s developing software with potential to decrease the number of needed punctures and increase accuracy. The app will be trained to adapt to individual body movement, food intake, and insulin needs—and it could be paired with hardware that has a universal remote for insulin pumps, to wirelessly automate shots. Hynes has already received a Sandbox grant and a research grant. With the enthusiastic support of prominent physicians, he also could receive well over $850,000 more in research funding.

The Entrepreneurship Launch Pad as a curriculum concept will be open to all disciplines observes Chris Speicher, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Business and Managerial Science. “Starting a business isn’t discipline-specific. I’ve sat in on art classes, and students have some amazing ideas for how to sell and market what they do,” Dr. Speicher says. “We’re impressed by the entrepreneurial spirit in students majoring in architecture, nutrition, music, the physician assistant program. This is about passion; it’s about channeling that passion into specific training. We can provide the right tools and help with that.”
“Starting a business isn’t discipline-specific. I’ve sat in on art classes, and students have some amazing ideas for how to sell and market what they do. We’re impressed by the entrepreneurial spirit in students majoring in architecture, nutrition, music, the physician assistant program. This is about passion; it’s about channeling that passion into specific training. We can provide the right tools and help with that.” —Dr. Chris Speicher

“We’ve built the program on what we’ve identified as three pillars of excellence—Instruct...Instill...Inspire,” says Art Comstock, Ph.D., Executive Director and Chairman of the Business and Managerial Sciences Department. “The approach we took about five years ago was to expose students to as many outsiders [in the business world] as we possibly could:"

“I absolutely insist that they get mentors,” Dr. Speicher states. “I ask, ‘Who do you aspire to be?’ Find that person who inspires you. We host the Entrepreneurship Speaker Series, in which we have about ten or twelve entrepreneurs come and make presentations each academic year. Then we instruct students go out and interview three people who have started companies they admire.

“We’ve had some of the most bizarre things happen,” he continues. “I had a student who picked up the phone and called T. Boone Pickens. The student received a hand-signed book and a business card with Pickens’ private number and a note that said, ‘Call me if you need me.’"

“You never know what’s going to grab students’ interest,” Dr. Comstock explains. “You have to make sure you get as many different entrepreneurs [as speakers/mentors] as you can...in all different areas to inspire them.”

Some of the successful business leaders featured in Marywood’s Entrepreneurship Speaker Series, Dr. Speicher notes, include Sal Maiolatesi of Maiolatesi Wine Cellars; Adam Ceresko of Pathmapp and Appek Mobile Apps; Jim Ritter of Ritter’s Farms; and Dick Yeungling of Yeungling Brewery. “We already have a student who wants to start a brew pub,” he adds.

An especially positive mentor has been Patrick Sandone, whose impeccable credentials include an MBA from Columbia University, and a summa cum laude Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Pennsylvania. After a highly successful career as a venture capitalist and investment banker in New York City, he returned to his Lackawanna Valley roots and founded Net Driven, a service technology firm (something of a natural, considering his family background in the automotive industry). Key contributors to the success of the forward-thinking firm are all products of a Marywood education: regional sales manager William Martellaro (MBA ’12), lead graphic designer Kathryn Bondi ’10, and creative director Travis Christianson, who studied graphic design at Marywood.

Dr. Speicher, who teaches an entrepreneurship class, says the ELP involves an “extremely hands-on” approach to making students who want to start their own businesses a success. “Our tagline is ‘Entrepreneurs Helping Each Other:’ The idea is to have an exchange of services. Our students will be looking to experienced entrepreneurs for assistance and guidance. In exchange, the students will be providing services to the entrepreneurs through internships, volunteerism, employment, and other factors.

“When you open up a text book, they all say the same thing. We all teach the same thing in the classroom about how to start a business, but until you take the students and inspire them to actually DO it—that’s when you get to that next level. That’s when it makes sense.”

In other words: if you’re daring enough to shoot for the entrepreneurial moon, it’s a good idea to (a) have solid, real life experience in handling the craft that can get you there...and (b) when challenges come along, look for backup and guidance from folks with know-how—those who believe “failure is not an option.”

More than 400 alumni visited Marywood University’s campus, May 31-June 2, to celebrate Reunion Weekend—an annual gathering where generations of alumni have the opportunity to meet and mingle, reconnect and re-engage.

Mary Burke Tracy ’63, who is also a retired Director of Marywood’s Alumni Office, attended the weekend-long event. She was eager to discuss her relationship with the University after many decades. “Fifty years ago Marywood gave us many things,” she said. “Our college years gave us something infinitely precious: we found each other and became longtime, close friends.”

During the reunion, the Class of 1963 presented a check for $2,665,600 to Sister Anne Munley, IHM, which was reflective of their collective endowments, capital projects, and scholarships over the past five years.

“It is always a pleasure to be back on the Marywood campus to see the progress of development that has been made since the last Reunion I attended,” noted Cheryl D’Andrea Lottman ’73, who was celebrating her 40th Reunion. “The best part is being with fellow classmates to share and remember. As I looked through the yearbook before this Reunion, I realized that there are so many classmates who touched our lives during our time on campus.”

This year’s Reunion Weekend was also one of the most popular; more than 90 alumni from multiple classes volunteered to help organize the event, which resulted in a 14 percent increase in attendance. The excitement generated by Reunion Weekend continues—the spirit of cooperation has sparked interest, prompting alumni to become more involved. A large committee has already formed and has begun planning next year’s event. Go to www.marywood.edu/reunion to get involved!
Dr. Mary Anne Merkel Fedrick, B.A. ’68, M.S. ’72, M.A. ’80
2013 Sister Denis Donegan Award for Long Term Service

Dr. Mary Anne Fedrick recently retired from her position as Dean of the Reap College of Education and Human Development, after 42 years of distinguished and dedicated service, in various capacities, to her alma mater. A three-time alumna, Mary Anne earned an undergraduate and two graduate degrees at Marywood. Later, she added her Ph.D. in Higher Education from Penn State University. She began her official career at Marywood as a librarian in 1971 and eventually became Director of the Learning Resources Center. She also served in leadership positions that encompassed enrollment management and admissions before becoming dean. A distinguished educator, Mary Anne was involved in research in technology integration, organizational culture, and organizational change. She also became the ultimate “go to” individual for questions about university policies, practices, and almost everything else. Throughout her tenure at Marywood, she has continued to serve the University as a faithful volunteer.

Daniel Simrell ’88
2013 Award for Excellence for Creative and Performing Arts

Dan Simrell has, since his student years, been active and creative in his profession. With the ink barely dry on his diploma, Dan started VideoLab, a video production company, serving businesses and advertising agencies in Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey. He later expanded his resume by accepting a position as marketing director for CCI, a national healthcare consulting company based in Pittsburgh. With the experience he gained, he formed Dan Simrell Advertising, a full-service agency. Through his creative, unconventional approach to marketing, Dan has earned a reputation for fresh, innovative, and highly successful campaigns.

Paula C. Rochon Mackery ’93
2013 Award for Excellence in Liberal Arts and Sciences

Paula Mackery is the exceptional journalist/entrepreneur, publisher, and owner of Happenings Magazine, the popular full-color, smartly designed publication dedicated to showcasing the fascinating people, places, and events of Northeast Pennsylvania. Thanks to networking, she already had a job with Happenings lined up before she graduated. Paula had plunged right in with the magazine, doing “a little of everything,” until, a few years later, when the opportunity arose for her to buy out the operation. Paula balances a career as a hard-working publisher with the role of wife and mother, plus she still finds time for involvement with community and professional organizations.

Colonel Lorraine Rupp Breen ’78
2013 Award for Excellence in Health and Human Services

From the moment she walked off the Marywood University campus in the spring of 1978 as a Nutrition and Dietetics magna cum laude graduate, Colonel Lorraine Rupp Breen immediately demonstrated her potential for leadership success in the health care, food service, and military professions. That step from the Rotunda 35 years ago would be the first of 19 moves she would make in that same period, traversing the nation numerous times and around the world, while performing in positions of senior health care leadership in both the civilian and military sectors.

Today, she is the Chief of Staff for the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs. The one thread in all her assignments has been her ability to lead large and small organizations while mentoring literally hundreds of people throughout her career. Reflecting Marywood University’s mission to prepare tomorrow’s leaders, Colonel Lorraine Rupp Breen has been a shining example for others to emulate.

Therese M. Redmond Dempsey, B.S. ’73, M.S. ’77
2013 Award for Excellence for Education and Human Development

As a teacher, peace advocate, and volunteer for many, many causes, Terry Dempsey’s impact has been profound. She and her husband, Dr. Jody Dempsey, also a Marywood graduate and clinical child psychologist, devised a Peace Camp with support and space from their Vestal home parish, recruiting teens from the area as counselors. Almost 2,000 children have attended the annual camp since its founding, often bringing friends and siblings. A special education teacher in Vestal, New York, with almost four decades of helping thousands of struggling children from preschool through high school, Terry’s impact on youth has extended far beyond academic and developmental concerns.

Jason Muskey ’98
Recent Graduate Award for Excellence for Professional Achievement

As a student athlete who competed on Marywood’s men’s cross country and basketball teams, Jason Muskey was certainly on the ball. Today, as a successful entrepreneur, owner of his own independent financial services agency, he is still very much on the ball. Jason kicked off his professional career as an agent and manager with the Prudential Insurance Company, and then became a manager at MetLife. With solid experience behind him, in 2005, he formed Muskey Financial Services, which he now operates as owner and general agent. This year, he also became co-owner of a second firm, Prevailing Wage Consultants. Jason has teamed up his fondness for sports with his commitment to community service, and his winning attitude sets a standard for future students.
Robert “Bob” Ide ’88
Nets Great Satisfaction as a Marywood Volunteer

During his student years at Marywood, Bob Ide ’88 didn’t picture himself as the type of guy who would eventually become a prominent and involved alumnus.

As an undergraduate student, Bob was involved with TVM (Marywood’s television station), and he also did his own radio show on WVM-FM. He was also very involved with the Intramural Men’s Basketball team, forging lifelong friendships with many of his teammates. [Men’s basketball wasn’t a recognized team sport at Marywood until 1991, at the junior varsity level; in 1993, it officially became a varsity sport.]

After graduation, Bob focused on his career, beginning a journey which led him to various news stations in Northeastern Pennsylvania. During that time, he met his wife, Susan, and they started a family. Bob was invited to serve on the Alumni Association Board and decided it was a great opportunity to give back to Marywood.

He quickly became involved in various events, like Breakfast with Santa, the MAC baseball game, MAC Knoebels Day, as well as Reunion Weekend. Tying into his passion for sports, Bob has been integral to the recent excitement surrounding Alumni Basketball Day. He has worked together with former Men’s Basketball Coach Eric Grundman, Women’s Coach Tara Macciocco, Assistant Director of Athletics and Recreation Andrew Smith, and Director of Athletics and Recreation Dr. Mary Jo Gunning. He noted, “It’s a great way to get student athletes, alumni, coaches, and friends together.”

Alumni Basketball Day is just the start of a new initiative to honor former team players. Soccer Alumni Day is already being planned, and reunions for other popular sports are soon to follow.

Now the President-Elect of the Marywood Alumni Association, Bob would love to see his fellow alumni take part in events, especially those who, like him, never imagined volunteering for the University.

“Even if it’s for just one event a year, and even if they can only take registrations for an hour or two, we would love to have our alumni back on campus.”

If you’re interested in volunteering, attending an event, or helping to plan an alumni gathering, please contact the Alumni Office by calling 570-348-6206 or e-mail alumni@marywood.edu.

Forever Green, Thom Sueta ’89

Become part of your alumni community today! Share what Forever Green means to you on the Marywood Alumni Facebook Page.
The entire Marywood University community was saddened to learn of the recent passing of Dustin Rhodes ’06. Dustin, 29, succumbed to stage 4 glioblastoma multiforme (GBM), a severely rapid and aggressive type of brain cancer, on July 31. He is survived by his wife, Rebecca Russo Rhodes ’06, and a son, Michael, 1, as well as his parents, brother, extended family, and many friends. His courageous journey, which began in December 2012 when a biopsy confirmed the presence of brain cancer, was chronicled in words, photos, and prayers on a website, http://dustrhodes.com/, and a Facebook page, Dustin Rhodes - The Fight Against Brain Cancer.

Sister M. Gabriel Kane, IHM ’52

The Marywood University community is saddened by the loss of Sister M. Gabriel Kane, IHM, former Vice President for Student Affairs (1969-1975), former Director of Admissions (1975-1984), and a former Marywood trustee, who died on Thursday, January 17, 2013, at Our Lady of Peace Residence in Scranton.

Sister Gabriel served as a teacher at elementary and high schools in Maryland, New York, and Pennsylvania, before beginning her tenure at Marywood. From 1984 to 2005, Sister Gabriel served as the Vicar for Religious and Associate Director of Vocations for the Diocese of Scranton. She also was the Director of the Renew Program during this time and served on the Diocesan Council of Women Religious, The Pontifical Association for the Missions, and as coordinator of the Religious Retirement Fund.

From 2005 to 2007, Sister Gabriel once again contributed her valuable service to Marywood—this time on the staff for Conference and Event Services. From 2007 until the time of her death, she was a prayer minister at Our Lady of Peace Residence in Scranton.

In addition to Marywood, Sister Gabriel also served on the boards of The University of Scranton; Scranton Preparatory School; St. Pius X Seminary, Dalton, PA; and St. Vincent Seminary, Latrobe, PA. She received a Bachelor of Science degree in Education from Marywood, a Master of Arts degree in French from Assumption College, and a Master of Science degree in Counseling from the University of Scranton.

Frank E. LaVergghetta

Marywood University is saddened to report the death of Frank E. LaVergghetta, a former trustee, loyal friend, and staunch champion of this institution.

He came to know and contribute to Marywood because of his commitment to his wife, Angela Sette LaVergghetta ’48, a distinguished alumna, who had returned to serve her alma mater as a member of the Marywood Board of Trustees. When she tragically passed away, Frank chose to pay tribute to her through his own strong support for Marywood and its students, providing funds to endow scholarships and renovate the performing arts facility, which was rededicated as the Sette LaVergghetta Center for the Performing Arts in 1998. In grateful recognition of his dedicated support and many contributions to the University, Marywood bestowed the Presidential Medal upon Frank LaVergghetta in 2001. Angela had been unable to complete her service on Marywood’s Board of Trustees, but Frank graciously took up that charge and fulfilled three terms as a trustee of the University, contributing his expertise to both the Physical Plant and Financial Affairs Committees.

Through the years of his association with Marywood and throughout his distinguished service on the board, he charted a true course of strong support and unfailing commitment to the University and to the cause of education.

Stacy Elias Davis, M.P.A. ’07

The Marywood University Community mourns the loss of Stacy Elias Davis (M.P.A. 2007), who was serving as Coordinator of Transfer Enrollment in the Marywood Admissions Office when she died unexpectedly on July 5, 2012.

A Wilkes-Barre native who resided in Moosic, she was the wife of Jeffrey Davis. Born August 31, 1981, Stacy was daughter of George J. and Madelyn Hannon Elias. She was a graduate of GAR High School, Class of 1999, received her bachelor’s degree from Shippensburg University in 2003, and earned an M.P.A. degree from Marywood University in 2007. She also was pursuing her doctorate at Marywood.

Stacy was a beloved colleague and friend, as well as an active employee. She was always ready to lend a helping hand, serving on both the University’s Professional Staff Senate and its Professional Development Committee. She is greatly missed by those who worked with her and had the privilege of her friendship.
WHERE IS THIS?

This is our featured photo from somewhere on Marywood’s campus. If you know where it is, please send your guess to: MarywoodMag@marywood.edu. The first five people to guess correctly will receive a gift from the Marywood Alumni Association.

*Because of the overwhelming response, only off-campus individuals are eligible to participate.

MEMORIAL REUNION GIFT

A gift was received by Marywood University in honor of Anna Bowman Rauscher ‘61 by her daughter Audrey Boucher. Sadly, Audrey passed away suddenly on February 13, 2013, but she chose a very special way to honor her mother—making a gift in her mother’s name in honor of her 50th reunion from Marywood.

KEEP US UPDATED!

We would like to hear from you and so would your classmates. When you submit a class note, your name will go into a drawing for a gift from the Marywood Alumni Association.

Attention snowbirds: Do you spend the winter months in Florida? Provide us with your contact information to receive updates about our annual alumni events in Florida.

Submit your class note or snowbird information by e-mailing alumni@marywood.edu or by calling the Office of Alumni Engagement at 570-348-6206.

The Accidental Chef
JOSEPH CAPUTO ’77
(Dog Ear Publishing, September 19, 2012)

The Accidental Chef is the story of a man who took almost a lifetime to realize that the accidentals of his first fifty years were really the essentials he needed to blossom as a happy, productive chef who enjoys what he does, how he does it, and how he brings enjoyment to others. Joseph Caputo has enjoyed a lifetime of family, educational, and theatrical experiences. He has combined his passion for food, storytelling, and theatre into a recipe for success. Spending countless hours in the kitchen of his boyhood home and in exceptionally fine restaurants in New York City and worldwide have helped him to develop a unique culinary style. Blessed with keen perception as to which ingredients created the great dishes he enjoyed, he most often came home with a recipe all his own, and more spectacular than the original. Today, he is chef/owner of two successful businesses, Catering by Joseph LTD and Zuppa del Giorno, both located in Scranton. The book is available online through national booksellers.

If You Can Play Scranton
NANCY McDONALD ’62
(Tribute Books, November 18, 2011)

At the turn of the 20th century, Scranton, Pennsylvania, was one of the most famous try-out towns for legitimate stage productions. If You Can Play Scranton is a theatrical history of America as seen through the famous performers who came to Scranton. It discusses performances by the best known actors and actresses of the tragic and comic stage, ethnic performers, vaudevilleans, musical comedy, concert, orchestra and band performers from 1871-2010. To find out more, you can visit the book’s website at www.IfYouCanPlayScranton.com or visit its Facebook page.

Reflections of a Cat Whisperer
MARY ANN MCNULTY CLIFFORD ’73
(Kindle Publishing, November 20, 2012)

Reflections of a Cat Whisperer is about the author’s journey from childhood and then into life as an adult. This book contains short stories, thoughts, and verses that present descriptions of her interactions with numerous felines over the years. This collection is not one continuous story; rather, it contains descriptions of moments with her thundering herd and other felines. All the expressed observations represented in this book are part of her wishes and dreams. In addition, some food for thought, alongside many tears and countless smiles, can be found throughout its pages. The proceeds made from the sale of this book are designated for research in feline hypertrophic cardiomyopathy heart disease at the Cornell Feline Health Center. For more information or to order the book, visit the publisher’s website (www.xlibris.com), online national booksellers, or a local bookstore.

Thy Will Be Done
M. E. LYNOTT (SHIMP), M.ED. ’72 (PEN NAME: RILEY LYNOTT)
(Kindle Publishing, January 2012)

Maggie Schmidt is no stranger to loss. Her mother passed away when she was young. Her husband disappeared in a scuba diving accident. Despite this, Maggie lives a happy life with her twin daughters at the beach. When her father dies, she thinks she knows how to handle death, and the changes that come with it. She has no idea that her Father’s Will could change everything. With these changes come decisions. Can Maggie open herself up to love again? Is she willing to risk it all with a crush from the past, or will her business partner finally win her heart? Join Maggie in Thy Will Be Done and enjoy the heartfelt story of love, life, and family. May be purchased through amazon.com for the Kindle or download the free Kindle App for your computer.

The Strategy Training Program Workbook
KRISTIN BEwick, ’85 (M.S. ’93, Ph.D. ’02)
MathWord Press, LLC (December 23, 2011)

The Strategy Training Program Workbook grew out of Kristin Bewick’s doctoral dissertation research at Marywood University. However, the learning strategies in the workbook have been developing since 1987 when she worked as a therapist with clients with special cognitive needs at the John Heinz Institute. Dr. Bewick went on to field test her learning strategy program with children of various ages and grade levels, including those with special needs. The workbook’s fun activities help children develop their skills in studying, remembering, organizing, and concentrating. The Strategy Training Workbook can be used by teachers, parents, tutors, clinicians, and specialists who want to help students learn. The Workbook is available online and at www.avventurapress.com.
