

Marywood University's

60-credit post-Masters Ph.D. Program in Human Development uses an interdisciplinary approach and research focus in the understanding of human development combined with a concentration area of study in one of the following tracks:

▶ NEW FOR FALL 2015

- Organizational Leadership: Appropriate for business and academic administrators or professionals engaged in organizational training and development.
- College/University Teaching: Appropriate for educators and researchers who want to pursue a tenure-track faculty position at a public or private institution of higher education.

AND CONTINUING TO OFFER:

- Health Promotion: Appropriate for health care or public health administrators, social work professionals, and research consultants working in health care or a health promotional environment.

Program Benefits

- Prepares students to address the complex challenges of the 21st century
- Provides leadership in the areas of Education, Social Services, Health Care, and Business
- Development of strong research and instructional skills
- Career advancement and professional networking opportunities

Flexible program options

enable you to earn your Ph.D. in as little as four years, and the program does not require on-campus residency.

Most courses are offered on weekdays and evenings, with some elective courses offered as hybrid or online formats to fit the hours of working professionals.

Program Overview

- 12 credits Core Interdisciplinary courses
- 12 credits Research Methods courses
- 12 credits Core Applied Interdisciplinary courses
- 12 credits Track elective courses
- 3 credits Special Topics Seminar (Capstone)
- 9 credits Dissertation

Students may be eligible for financial aid and can apply for scholarships and graduate assistantships on an annual basis. For further information or to schedule an appointment to visit the campus, contact:

Dr. Deborah Hokien, Program Director, at (570) 348-6279 or hokien@marywood.edu.

APPLICATION DEADLINE IS

FEBRUARY 20

Apply now at marywood.edu